Roots, rhythms and records

New exhibition 'Roots, Rhythms & Records: The Sounds and Stories of African & Caribbean Music in Hackney' launches at Hackney Museum on 4 October as part of the Council's Black History Season of events. Pictured above: Outside Muzik City, Ridley Road, Dalston, c1970s

A SEASON of events to celebrate Black History Month is launching in October, exploring Hackney's links to the Caribbean and Africa. A highlight is the exhibition 'Roots, Rhythms & Records:

The Sounds and Stories of African & Caribbean Music in Hackney', which opens at Hackney Museum on 4 October. The Council's Black History Season will also include the hoisting of a flag above Hackney Town Hall; a screening of the cult 1980s film 'Babylon', and book readings. See pages 8-9.

HEALTH FUND TO OPEN

HALF-a-million pounds is available to organisations aimed at improving health and wellbeing in the borough.

The Healthier City and Hackney Fund is set to be launched on 8 October. It combines money from the Council and Hackney Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG) and is thought to be the biggest funding of its kind in the country.

Organisations can secure up to £60,000 for a project for 2019/20. Applications for funding must focus on local health issues and/or inequalities and will fall into three areas: healthy activities, ideas and the next generation.

Last year, 16 community groups were awarded grants from the £500,000 pot of money available. Mental health charity Core Arts was given funding to deliver support sessions for adults discharged from mental health crisis support, and the Terrence Higgins Trust was awarded cash to research how racism and heterosexism impacts on lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender people of colour in Hackney.

Hackney CVS also secured funding for a project delivered with the Community African Network to improve bowel cancer screening rates among older members of the Afro-Caribbean community.

Dr Mark Rickets, CCG Chair, said: "We are excited to continue working closely together to build on the success of the first year of the Healthier City and Hackney Fund. We are looking for innovative ideas to help address local health issues and I would encourage all organisations who think they have one to apply."

The launch event for the next round of funding takes place on 8 October, at Pembury Community Centre, from 9.30am to 12.30pm. It is open to any organisation interested in securing funding for projects to run from May next year.

Licence to let

New property licensing measures are set to come into force on 1 October, meaning Hackney's landlords could face fines if they hold a licence

LANDLORDS in Hackney could face unlimited fines and prosecution unless they apply for a licence by 3 December, as part of new property licensing measures that come into force on 1 October.

The new powers mean that landlords of all private rented homes in Brownswood, Cazenove and Stoke Newington wards will need to hold a licence committing them to keeping properties safe and treating tenants fairly.

Also, landlords of the 4,000 Houses in Multiple Occupation (HMOs) – with two or more households and shared facilities such as kitchens, bathrooms and toilets – across the borough will need a licence requiring them to meet acceptable standards.

“We’re encouraging all landlords to check if they need a licence and get their applications in to us”

Those who don't get a licence or fail to comply with the conditions will face fixed penalties of up to £30,000, a criminal prosecution with unlimited fines, or be forced to pay tenants back up to a year's rent. Serious offenders can be banned from letting homes completely, and placed on a rogue landlords database.

The Council's private housing enforcement team is set to almost double in size to uncover perpetrators and tackle issues such as inadequate heating, damp and mould, dangerous boilers, exposed wiring and vermin infestations.

Council research found that around one in five homes covered under the new measures suffer from serious hazards, disrepair or poor management.

Kim Wright, Group Director for Neighbourhoods and Housing, said: “Many of Hackney's landlords provide a good, professional service, and we're looking forward to working with them to create better conditions for renters in Hackney.

“But these new measures – along with our expanded enforcement team – will tackle those who don't treat renters fairly or keep their homes safe.

“We're encouraging all landlords to check if they need a licence and get their applications in to us before we begin enforcement in December.”

Report non-emergency Council household repairs online

REPORTING a Council household repair is easier than ever thanks to a free, online service.

Tenants can make non-emergency requests, such as fixing a dripping tap or a blocked toilet, in around five minutes by going to the Council website and reporting the details.

The service allows tenants to make a non-emergency repair request to a home; book or request an appointment for a repairs worker to visit at a convenient time; and send an enquiry about a repair.

Tenants do not need to register to access the service but simply submit their door number and postcode. They can then view any updates electronically.

The new service is part of the Council's move to modernise how it works, in response to the changing ways residents are choosing to access services, as well as the need to work more efficiently.

To raise an online request, visit: hackney.gov.uk/report-a-repair

Residents who don't have online access can call: 020 8356 3691.

ARCHAEOLOGISTS working on Hackney's first ever Scheduled Ancient Monument – a site of national importance – have uncovered objects that bring Shakespeare's audiences and plays to life.

Excavations for The Theatre, deemed to be Shakespeare's original playhouse in Curtain Road, have recently focused on eight small areas outside the original building.

Archaeologists from MOLA (Museum of London Archaeology) believe that a 'theatre complex' stood in the site, with enough space for audiences to mingle, eat, drink and socialise during long performances.

Heather Knight, lead archaeologist from MOLA, said: "It's incredible to be back on site at The Theatre. It's an internationally significant and iconic archaeological site and a really special place for archaeologists, historians, thespians and Londoners – but especially for Shoreditch, London's first theatreland."

"It was the discovery of The Theatre that gave Hackney its first Scheduled Ancient Monument; hopefully this dig will bring more amazing discoveries to light."

Among the key finds so far uncovered are a complete Elizabethan goblet, a unique fragment of pottery depicting a well-dressed bearded man

News in brief

Council tenant fined for illegally sub-letting property

A COUNCIL tenant has been forced to pay thousands of pounds after illegally subletting his Council property. Jeremy Matuba pleaded guilty in August to three criminal offences under the Fraud Act 2006 related to subletting his home and providing false information on two Right to Buy applications.

A Council investigation identified evidence that he had sublet his Council home to multiple sub-tenants while he was actually living elsewhere. Mr Matuba was sentenced to a two-year suspended prison sentence, 250 hours' community service and a three-month curfew.

The criminal prosecution followed separate legal proceedings in the civil court to end the tenancy which resulted in an award of outright possession to the Council. A conviction for certain criminal offences enables the Council to take further action under the Proceeds of Crime Act (POCA), allowing for the confiscation of criminal assets, regardless of whether they are directly linked to the original conviction. Proceedings concluded on 19 September, resulting in a confiscation order against Mr Matuba for £147,998.97.

Ian Williams, Hackney Council's Corporate Director for Finance and Resources, said: "Hackney is determined to ensure that our social housing is used for those genuinely in need of housing assistance."

Anybody who wishes to report social housing misuse is urged to contact the Tenancy Fraud Team on: 020 8356 2508; or by email to: housing.fraud@hackney.gov.uk

Universal Credit set to replace key benefits

WORKING age Hackney residents making new benefits claims will need to apply for Universal Credit from 3 October.

Universal Credit is being rolled out nationally, and Hackney is one of the last areas to make the switch. It replaces some key benefits comprising job seekers allowance, employment and support allowance, income support, child tax credit, working tax credits and housing benefit with one monthly payment, paid into the recipient's bank, building society or credit union account once a month. At first, it will only affect new claimants and existing claimants whose circumstances have changed.

Pensioners, those with three or more dependent children living at home and anyone who is living in temporary accommodation provided by the Council or some types of specialist accommodation, are exempt.

One of the biggest changes will affect those who rent their home and rely on housing benefit to help pay their rent.

Under Universal Credit, they will be expected to pay their rent directly to their landlord. In case their circumstances change, residents are being advised to prepare for Universal Credit now, by ensuring they have a bank or credit union account, making sure they know how much their rent and service charges are and the details of who they need to pay them to.

In some cases, if residents have concerns about managing their money, they can ask

Job Centre Plus staff to arrange for payments to be made directly to their landlord.

Hackney Council tenants who have any questions about their rent or support available can contact: 020 8356 3100.

A PRIZE open to the best young artists in Europe has been won by a painter whose work celebrates Hackney's community spirit.

Linea Matei won the Bright Young Things Take Hackney competition, sponsored by Mactac. The mural she designed has been unveiled in Bohemia Place, Hackney Central.

Linea, a student at Konstfack University College of Arts Crafts and Design in Sweden, impressed judges with her design inspired by Hackney's diversity.

She said: "Hackney is a community full of energy and passion. The most touching piece of information that I came across was that nine out of 10 residents say that Hackney is a place where people from different backgrounds get on well together.

"This made me know what to do, to represent the people, with different backgrounds and stories, through history to the present day and into the

Hackney is a community full of energy and passion... it is a place where people from different backgrounds get on future, connected with each other, and to become a mural with bright colours to spread energy, love and connection.

"It was really a pleasure creating this mural and to get to know even more about Hackney and the community."

Her work was unveiled on 6 September, coinciding with the opening of a pop-up store from the new brand West Carolina, created by the fashion designer Ana Carolina who was also a finalist of the Bright Young Things competition.

The prize was judged by art and design industry leaders including fashion designer Christopher Raeburn, and funded by manufacturing and distribution company Avery Dennison.

Angus McGuffin, Global Creative Director for Avery Dennison, said: "This competition gives young artists and designers a chance to showcase their work on a huge, architectural canvas."

Yet residents can recycle any cooked or uncooked food, vegetable and fruit peelings, tea bags, bones, egg shells and plate scrapings in their blue bin. No amount of food waste is too small.

This food then gets turned into compost, which is used for agriculture and generates renewable energy.

As well as recycling unwanted food in a blue bin, residents can also make other changes to their daily routine to reduce food waste, such as freezing bread to eat at a later date.

It's no loafing matter that 2.6 million slices of bread are thrown away every day from London households.

Davina Rai, Hackney Council Recycling Officer, said: "Most people now recycle household items such as bottles and cans, but we need more people to realise that recycling your food waste is important too.

"As well as helping the environment, recycling food waste is also much cheaper for the Council. The money saved can be used for other public services, such as playgrounds or transport."

The event is free and there will also be refreshments, entertainment, goodie bags and a raffle.

Consultation on Windrush compensation scheme

A GOVERNMENT consultation has been launched on how it should compensate members of the Windrush generation adversely affected by immigration laws.

The 'Windrush generation' refers to people who, between 1948 to 1971, were invited by successive governments to relocate to Britain from their homes in Commonwealth countries in the Caribbean to address labour shortages. Despite widely being considered British citizens, many didn't receive formal papers and new laws which came into force with the Immigration Act 2014 led to some facing immigration issues and difficulty demonstrating their lawful status.

The consultation paper outlines the Government's proposed compensation scheme to redress those affected, and asks for feedback. The consultation closes on 11 October. For more information, or to have your say, visit: is.gd/3ZljX4

The Council also wants to hear from people who have been affected, and will be holding support and advice workshops. To tell the Council how you, or someone you know, has been affected, and to register your interest for the workshops, email: research@hackney.gov.uk

Use your loaf and get a grip on food waste as Hackney Recycling Week begins

THANKS to 10,000 residents that ordered a food waste caddy over the past two years, Hackney is now recycling more than ever before.

For this year's Recycle Week, which takes place from 24 to 30 September, the Council wants even more people to reduce and recycle their food waste, which will help lower the borough's impact on the environment and help households save money.

According to Recycle for London, households in the capital throw away one bag of food shopping for every five bought, which means around £840 per family goes in the bin each year. As well as being bad for the bank balance, all this waste generates 19 million tonnes of CO₂ emissions.

Cadent
Your Gas Network

Gas Mains Replacement Chatsworth Road

Cadent are continuing to replace and upgrade the gas mains in Hackney with safer and more durable modern pipes. This will reduce the amount of unplanned work on our gas network and is essential to provide safe and reliable energy.

We are currently replacing the gas mains along Chatsworth Road from Fletching Road to the junction with Lea Bridge Road. To give a working area that is large enough to do the work safely and because of the location of the existing pipes, we need to have traffic management in place as shown on the map.

We are continuing to work with Hackney Council, Transport for London and the emergency services to minimise the inconvenience to people who work, live or travel through the area. Throughout the work, all shops and businesses will be open as usual.

To find out more about the work, please call or email our Community Relations Team on 0800 389 8261 or info@communityrelations.co.uk.

A PIONEERING service providing immediate support to young people who have been the victim of violent assault has been launched in Homerton Hospital.

The service, known as the Youth Violence Intervention Programme, is run by youth work charity Redthread, and is part-funded by the Council and the City and Hackney Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG).

It aims to tackle youth violence by meeting young people who have been the victim of assault, stabbings, gun crime, sexual assault and domestic violence as soon as they arrive at A&E.

Franklyn Addo, Team Leader of the new service in Hackney, said: "Homerton isn't a major trauma centre, unlike where other Redthread services are based, so the injuries people come in with are generally less physically traumatic.

"But research tells us that the people we work with go to a local hospital four or five times before they end up in a major trauma centre.

"This means we can be more preventative and open with our approach because we're reaching people earlier. I genuinely feel like we can make more of a difference here because people are less entrenched in violence."

When a young patient arrives at hospital, youth workers from Redthread work alongside clinical staff to meet young patients in the A&E waiting room, on wards or even in a resuscitation bay.

This is because intense crisis can often be a catalyst for self-reflection or pursuing positive change, and reaching young people at this point can be a trigger for them to change direction.

"I haven't been turned away by a young person yet," Shay Oldham,

Franklyn Addo, Team Leader of the service, with members of the Homerton Hospital team who provide support to young victims of youth crime

Youth workers continue to mentor and advise young people after they have left hospital and support them to make long-term positive plans.

In August alone, the Redthread team at Homerton had 31 people referred to them.

FIND out about the time Bob Marley played in Dalston, explore Hackney's links to the Caribbean and look at how black British music has shaped the borough, as the Council celebrates black history and culture with a two-month long season of free events and activities.

The Council's Black History Season will include the hoisting of a flag – designed by 13-year-old Malaika Parillon Langlais Baron, from The Urswick School – above Hackney Town Hall; a screening of the cult 1980s film 'Babylon', free steel pan lessons, and craft workshops for children.

One of this year's highlights is 'Doing it for Ourselves', a discussion on jazz history in the borough at Hackney Archives.

The event includes speakers from the internationally renowned band Jazz Warriors alongside music documentary makers Anthony Collins and Winstan Whitter.

Another key event will be the Black History Month book club, where a copy of 'Blood Sister', by Hackney author Dreda Say Mitchell, can be picked up from a borough library.

There will also be a tea party celebration for Caribbean elders, part of the commemorations for the 70th anniversary of the arrival of HMT Empire Windrush, aboard which some 500 migrants from the Caribbean arrived in 1948.

Roots, rhythms & records

The sounds and stories of African & Caribbean music in Hackney

FROM as early as 1873 black musicians have been influencing the cultural scene in Hackney.

By the 1970s the borough was leading the way in genres such as rocksteady and reggae and producing its own internationally renowned stars.

A new exhibition opening at Hackney Museum next month explores this and the important history and legacy of African and Caribbean music in the borough.

The exhibition, 'Roots, Rhythms & Records: The Sounds and Stories of African & Caribbean Music in Hackney', launches on 4 October at the museum, and runs until March.

The launch event will be followed by a free live music gig at 8pm, in the Hackney Empire bar, which includes performances from African and Caribbean musicians in the borough today, such as the Grand Union Orchestra.

Hackney's well established African and Caribbean communities have used music as an opportunity for personal expression, and to challenge issues of discrimination and racism for years.

Nightclubs, radio stations, sound systems and record shops have been established in the borough to meet the cultural, social and economic needs of the community.

The display uncovers the history behind music in Hackney, including photographs, oral histories and stories from some of

By Harriet Worsley

NEVER had a drum kit in Jamaica, but I always loved music. I would listen to the radio and practise on the table with a knife and fork," says Jah Bunny.

"The drummer I really loved was Lloyd Knibbs from The Skatalites. He was creator of this new style – the ska drumming – and was the originator of the 'one drop'. I had a friend, Keith Stirling, whose brother was in the Skatalites and one day he took me to Studio One to meet him."

In the studio's yard, the young Jah Bunny spotted his musical idol. Also there was a young man and his band singing 'Simmer Down' while waiting for their session to start. The band, who had yet to put a record out, were Bob Marley and The Wailers.

"I didn't speak to them, I just stood watching the operation; how they conduct themselves, how they arrange their music," says Jah Bunny.

The Skatalites began to play, and he watched his idol closely.

When the band took a break, he spotted his moment: "Keith was learning the piano," he says. "So he jumped on the piano, and I jump on the drums and we go bashing away together. They were all surprised to hear us."

It was Jah Bunny's first ever turn on a real drum kit, and he was hooked.

Three years later, his father decided that it was time for the boy to join him in London, 'to better myself,' says Jah Bunny.

Adding: "It had been 10 years since I had seen him and I was so happy. I travelled on my own and it was my first plane ride. It was the strangest thing. One morning I was in Jamaica, the next I was in London."

His father brought him straight to Hackney: "From the East End of Kingston, to the East End of London," laughs Jah Bunny. "It was a bit cold and strange and I missed my family. I saw snow on the ground and there was some prejudice around, people uttering racist comments.

"But I had ambition to get on with life and to start my music career, and Hackney was a good place to do that.

"There were producers like Mr Coke, who had the Magnet label, and lived in Stoke Newington. And clubs like All Nations Club. I just strived on. It was my dream that I would become the best reggae drummer in England."

Aged 15, he took on work with a mechanics, spraying cars. And soon his luck began to improve.

He got a job in Music City record shop on Ridley Road. His father bought him his first drum kit, and he started his first band with his friend Gene Rondo, a singer, and the record shop's manager Joe Sinclair.

The band was called The Trojans and they were soon being noticed.

When Jamaican vocal duo Bob and Marcia had a hit with 'Young Gifted and Black', The Trojans were asked to support them on their UK tour.

Jah Bunny recalls: "We went all over the UK and I saw places like Huddersfield and Leeds... You could say I'm lucky – fresh from Jamaica and meeting all these people, doing all this session work... But word got around fast and producers wanted to hear my style of reggae.

"I worked hard and I avoided trouble. That's how young people can make their dreams come true."

After The Trojans came The Undivided, who were signed to Decca Records in 1974. When they broke up, Jah Bunny was running a Dalston record shop called Java and touring with Toots and the Maytals when the phone rang.

Jah Bunny says: "A band called Matumbi had heard that The Undivided broke up. They had been watching me, so they phoned me and ask me to join them."

A year or so later, they were signed to EMI and their single, 'Point of View' was a hit. He says: "So we go to the Shepherd's Bush studios to be on 'Top of the Pops'. That was my first experience of the BBC and it was lovely to take reggae further."

With his next band, The Cimarons, Jah Bunny toured Scandinavia and worked with Paul McCartney: "He was cool. Linda McCartney was a lovely lady, too. She used to come to take photos and bring refreshments when we were rehearsing."

Jah Bunny also worked with Ian Dury. "He called me Buzby," he laughs, "after the bird in the BT adverts, because I was always calling my wife and kids when we were on tour."

He has four children in all, who "inspire me to keep the line and work hard." Accordingly, he now has a band called Jah Bunny All Stars who play regularly across London, including Hackney Empire's bar.

His proudest moment, however, remains being crowned 'best drummer' in the first ever Black Echoes British Reggae Awards in 1977.

Jah Bunny says: "That really lifted me up. I called my mum, back in Jamaica, and she say 'I always know it. You used to drum the wall, the fence, boxes, anything!' So I know I make her happy."

THE GREEN GENIE

All your green questions answered

Q: I have been using reusable nappies, but we are going to be potty training soon and I want to know if there is an eco-friendly version of a potty, as I feel wasteful buying a solid plastic potty and then throwing it away after a couple of months. Can you help?

A: You can always check local baby swaps, or other sharing economy groups, on Facebook and Freecycle to see if anyone has a potty that they don't need any more and could give you. Then you can do the same once you've finished with it.

There are also biodegradable potties on the market. These cost around £10 and look like plastic but are made of bamboo and rice husks. When you don't need the potty anymore simply bury it in your garden and it will start to biodegrade. You can even sprinkle some wildflower seeds over where it is buried as it will provide some nutrients for plants.

Take the zero waste challenge

FROM poisoning and injuring marine life, to littering cities and surrounding countryside, plastic is threatening the survival of the planet.

That is why the Council is asking residents to take on the zero waste challenge, where participants aim to not produce any waste over the course of a week.

The challenge sets to help people look at ways they can recycle what they use, or even reduce the waste they create in the first place by switching to reusables.

There are many ways to reduce waste, such as switching from plastic shower gel bottles to a bar of soap, using reusable water bottles or buying bamboo toothbrushes instead of plastic.

Ander Zabala, Recycling Manager at Hackney Council, said: "Obviously recycling is really important, and most people are now getting the hang of it, but what we really need to do is reduce the amount of waste we create in the first place.

"We can do this by reusing, up-cycling and taking part in the sharing economy.

"I would encourage all

New kids on the block are a goat success at Clissold Park

CLISSOLD Park's newest residents, two Anglo Nubian goats, arrived this month and have already made a big impression.

The local lads were born seven months ago at Hackney City Farm and have been named Wallace and Gromit after Clissold Park gardener Martin's favourite animated TV characters.

Residents are being invited to have a grand day out in the park to welcome the new additions, who can be seen frolicking in the goat enclosure near Clissold House.

Gardener Martin

Jarmaine said: "It's great to welcome Wallace and Gromit to the park, and to see that they have already made a big impression with local children making regular trips down to their enclosure to say hello.

"They are full of character and can be seen happily playing together.

"These two brothers are the best of friends, and I would suggest residents come down to the park to welcome them."

Goats have been a feature in the park since it opened in 1889.

Jonny Woo's Un-Royal Variety

19-20 October, Hackney Empire, 291 Mare St, E8 1EJ

JONNY Woo's annual variety show may be 'un-royal' (their words), but it must surely take gold for hosting the most queens.

This year's bonanza at Hackney Empire is no exception. The alt-drag star has persuaded some of the world's best cabaret, drag and nu-variety performers to share his sparkly and spectacular stage. Feminist comedian and Edinburgh comedy award winner Adrienne Truscott has a turn; opera cabaret star Le Gateau Chocolat wows in a wig, beard and beautiful baritone; and Christeene and Lucy McCormick are planning a 'one-of-kind' duet, plus so much more. And then, of course, there's the queen of the show Jonny himself, reviving his Mary Portas homage in a Halloween performance that promises 1,000 dancing Liza Minnellis – the ultimate ladies in waiting.

1 Oct-30 Nov, various venues

WHAT'S the best month in East London? That's right, it's Photomonth. The annual, East London-wide celebration is back this October, celebrating photography in all its shapes, sizes and styles.

In honour of the 100th anniversary of women gaining the right to vote, this year's theme is 'Women in the 21st Century' and it's all kicking off on 4 October at theprintspace on Kingsland Road. The gallery is hosting Photo-Open, the festival's landmark show.

Each year, they put out an open call for submissions. The result is photos by emerging artists being hung beside internationally renowned photographers. The public are even invited to vote for 'The best in Show' image.

Don't stop here, though. During October and November, local spaces from Rich Mix to Hackney Museum will be awash with photography. Check out the website to find more venues, make it snappy...

A specially designed street theatre programme for children aged between five and 13 is run by Hackney-based charity Mimbire

A HOXTON-based charity that helps send children's confidence soaring – literally – is reopening its doors for a new term.

Founded in 1999, Mimbire is a female-led contemporary circus company. Its youth programme is designed for children aged between five and 13 and uses acrobats and street dance to improve confidence, well-being and inclusion, while positively engaging young people in the arts.

Anna Strickland, youth programme coordinator, said: "I am really excited about the new term. It's a great opportunity for young people to do something active and fun with their evenings, as well as meet new friends and grow their confidence."

One student added: "Mimbire is fun! I like acrobatics, and I like street dance and put together makes it even better!"

The youth programme's weekly classes take place on Tuesdays at the Milton Gardens Community Centre, N16.

“It's a great opportunity for young people to do something active and fun with their evenings”

Classes are free for residents of the Milton Gardens Estate, and there are a range of bursaries for low-income families too.

Lina Johansson, co-artistic director, said: "Access to the arts is central to everything we do and we've got a great term lined up with professional dance and circus performers, all passionate about sharing their skills with the next generation.

"Our programme allows everyone to learn something new and take pride in their body and their creativity."

News in brief

Borough's actors take a bow

SOME of Hackney's finest young actors congregated on stage at Hackney Empire to celebrate the school that makes them, and others before them, stars.

The Hackney branch of the Anna Fiorentini Theatre and Film School turned 17 this year and marked the anniversary with a gala performance on 15 September. Over 160 students from the Hackney and Docklands branches of the school performed numbers from West End musicals.

The young performers were all aged between seven and 18, and several have already won professional roles: Jaden Oshenye recently played Fletcher in West End show The Bodyguard, while Orla Hill has starred in the films 'Swallows and Amazons' and 'Song for Marion'.

The show raised over £3,500 for the Fiorentini Foundation, a charitable arm of the school that funds performing arts classes for less privileged children with the aim of increasing their confidence and self-esteem.

The Anna Fiorentini Theatre & Film School is holding a taster session on 29 September.

Hoxton Market's young traders win national award

YOUNG entrepreneurs from the Gascoyne and Morningside estate youth clubs have won a national markets 'Special Commendation Award' this month for setting up their own business.

They travelled to Stratford-upon-Avon to pick up the award from the National Market Traders' Federation.

Their bath bomb and toy business has been running for 18 months with a regular pitch at Hoxton Market on Saturdays.

Market stall holder Gloria Baptista, 14, said: "It was an amazing experience for us all. I feel really proud to represent Hackney."

The 12 members, aged between nine and 13, decide how much profit to keep and how much to invest back into the company.

Youth club manager, Nicolette Nixon, said: "I'm so unbelievably proud of them, they are very professional and give a really positive view of Hackney to everyone."

Those under 18 looking to get involved in the project can attend youth club sessions at the Morningside Community Centre, E9, and the Gascoyne Community Centre, E9.

HACKNEY is one of the first councils in the UK to sign up to the Local Government Declaration on Sugar Reduction and Healthier Food.

Cabinet agreed to the declaration on 17 September, signing the Council up to work with local groups and businesses to follow its example in creating a healthier environment for people living and working in Hackney.

It is also an official commitment to continue the work that has already been taking place to tackle the high levels of obesity in the borough.

Dr Penny Bevan, Director of Public Health, said: "By signing the declaration the Council has agreed to improve the availability of healthier food and drinks across Hackney, and reduce the availability and promotion of unhealthy options."

"Most of this work is already taking place through a cross-sector partnership across the borough leading a 'whole-systems' approach to making Hackney a healthier borough."

"The declaration supports our strategic objectives to tackle obesity and health inequalities with pledges that can be delivered practically while aligning with other Council services."

Raising public awareness

Signing up to the declaration builds on, enhances and complements much of the existing work already done by the Council and its partners.

For example, the Council launched Sugar Smart Hackney last year to reduce sugar consumption in the borough, which can lead to obesity.

Children in more than 20 primary schools now take part in the Hackney Daily Mile, which launched two years ago to get children more active.

The Council has also worked with local partners to produce an affordable recipe pack (designed by residents); supported food businesses to improve their food offer (through the 'Healthier Catering Commitment'); and improved access to support for people using adult social care services who are overweight.

Compassionate Neighbours project obtains lottery grant

A PROJECT delivered by St Joseph's Hospice, to support people who are experiencing loneliness, has received a Big Lottery Grant of £415,002 to continue its work.

The grant will enable the Compassionate Neighbours project to be developed further in Hackney and expand into Tower Hamlets.

Compassionate Neighbours are volunteers who support people who are experiencing loneliness and isolation, and are living with a chronic or terminal illness.

The neighbours are matched to people in their local community, where new friendships are formed over cups of tea and strolls through the park.

Carly Attridge, Head of Volunteering at St Joseph's Hospice, said: "We are so grateful to the Big Lottery Fund for enabling us to take the project from strength to strength, reaching more people in need and expanding our reach into a new borough."

New diabetes technology now available in Hackney

A NEW technology for people with diabetes is now available in Hackney.

City & Hackney Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG) have approved the use of Flash Glucose Monitoring, which means people who meet local criteria will be able to get it free of charge on prescription for the first time.

Diabetes is a condition where there is too much glucose in the blood because the body cannot use it properly. Many people with diabetes need to self-monitor their blood glucose levels. This is usually done with a finger prick blood test.

Flash Glucose Monitoring uses a small sensor that people wear on their skin. It continuously records and stores the last eight hours of glucose readings, and can be read by scanning the sensor whenever needed.

Roz Rosenblatt, Head of London at Diabetes UK, said: "It's really good news that people in Hackney will be able to get Flash free of charge on prescription."

Active ageing pilot reduces 999 calls in the borough

A PILOT run by London Ambulance Service NHS Trust in partnership with Royal Voluntary Service (RVS) has helped cut emergency calls and visits to A&E among frequent fallers in Hackney.

The seven-month active ageing pilot scheme was set up to decrease the number of falls in Hackney and Merton, with a goal of reducing demand on both the ambulance service and hospitals.

The pilot tested a new model of 'mobility volunteers'. Older people who fell frequently and called 999 were referred to RVS, which then paired local volunteers with clients.

The volunteers visited clients in their homes and worked with them for six to eight weeks to improve their physical health.

The pilot had a number of positive outcomes, including a 42 per cent reduction in falls among clients, a 45 per cent decrease in calls to 999 as a result of a fall, and a 29 per cent reduction in clients being admitted to A&E.

Dr Allison Smith, Head of Strategy and Development at RVS, said: "We are very pleased with these results, given the age and high levels of frailty of these clients."

hackneyarchives

MOST of the photographs from RA Gibson's studio that Hackney Today has featured so far have been of people whose identities are unknown to the Archives.

This week the paper takes a look at some of the celebrities captured by Gibson. The collection features athletes, film stars and musicians from the 1950s and 60s.

For example, 50s model and film star Sabrina is pictured bringing Hollywood glamour to the opening of Myers furniture store in Hackney, while a crowd gathers outside.

'Carry On' film star Hattie Jacques appears at Stamford Hill Bowling Alley and actor Alfie Bass is pictured in a grocers watched by onlookers. Fashion designer Mary Quant is photographed with her make up range at a conference.

Arguably, the most famous person who appears in the collection is the Queen who was photographed, along with the Duke of Edinburgh, being driven along Pembury Road during her 1977 Jubilee tour.

Hackney Archives, based in Dalston, is carrying out a two-year project to digitise images from Gibson's studio so that they can be shared with local people at events around the borough and online. A key part of the project involves interviewing people who appear in the photographs so that their stories can be preserved as part of the history of Hackney.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2018. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

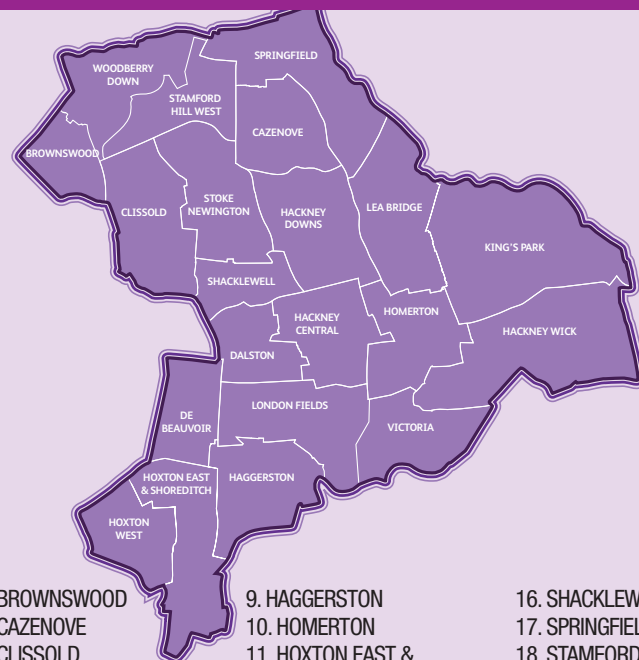

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville was directly elected by the borough in 2018. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall.

To book an appointment, e-mail: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 2212. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney, who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Clare Potter.

Have your say on Council housing through two workshops at the leaseholder and freeholder open day

THE Council is seeking views from residents at the leaseholder and freeholder open day, which is set to take place on 13 October, at The Urswick School, from 11am to 4pm.

The open day will include two workshops where residents will explore:

1. Service satisfaction to look at satisfaction levels and how to improve services to leaseholders and freeholders.

2. Enhanced service offer to give leaseholders and freeholders on estates access to a range of Council services to improve the safety and condition of their homes. These will include the option of having annual gas safety checks carried out by the Council, or having other fire safety works, including the replacement of property entrance doors, undertaken by the Council's specialist contractors.

Those who attend and contribute to a one hour workshop will be given a £20 Love2Shop voucher as a thank you for taking part.

Registration closes on 8 October. Visit: hackney.gov.uk/leaseholders-and-freeholders
